

Needy Glasses Purchased By "New Eyes"

When you're six years old, the world can be a wonderful place--if you can see it.

Tommy couldn't. He lived in a world of blurred images--school is tough enough when you're six. But it's even worse when your friends are learning to read, and you can't keep up.

To Tommy, letters were merely blurs; so were baseballs and faces. Because Tommy's father had long been out of work, glasses were simply out of the question--until this year.

The boy's glasses were paid for by a volunteer organization hundreds of miles away, called New Eyes for the Needy, Inc., of Short Hills, New Jersey.

New Eyes, as it is familiarly known, has earned the reputation of being one of the most effective sight-saving charities in the world. It has helped thousands of needy people obtain glasses--here and abroad--and it has never asked for a cent in donations.

Since its inception, almost 40 years ago, New Eyes has asked only for used glasses and precious metal articles such as old watches, jewelry, (real, costume and antique), good or damaged silver and dentures.

The eyeglasses and glittering clutter are sent to New Eyes for Needy, Inc., Short Hills, New Jersey, 07078. Thousands of packages from all over the United States arrive in the stucco headquarters every year. There, volunteers, mostly housewives, sort out the glasses, separating those in plastic frames from those in metal frames. Many of the 250 workers have learned to operate complex optical grinding and testing equipment. They help fill specific orders from missions and hospitals in foreign countries where plastic framed glasses and sunglasses are sent.

The metal framed glasses have their uses, too. Through refitting, they yield precious metals that are sold, along with the jewelry, to finance New Eyes funds in over 100 hospitals and health agencies throughout the United States. The money in these funds buys glasses for people who have nowhere else to turn.

In addition to these funds, arrangements have also been made in 48 states through health and welfare agencies whereby New Eye purchases glasses for carefully screened persons, to whom no other private or public funds are available.

Last year, 8,000 people were helped under this program. Tommy was one of them.

But as public response has grown throughout the years, so has the volume of requests. Therefore, New Eyes needs more discarded jewelry and eyeglasses to do its job. As one New Eyes volunteer put it,

"The wonderful thing about New Eyes is that we can ask people to send us things they no longer need."

And these gifts can bring vision to a little boy, like Tommy.

HOG SALE SLATED FOR AUBURN

Hampshire, Landrace, Yorkshire, and Duroc will be featured. The sale will be held at the Livestock Arena on the Auburn University campus Thursday, February 24, at 1:00 p.m. says Extension Farm Agent J. R. Speed.

Speed says the 30 to 35 hogs to be sold will be on inspection at the Livestock Arena the morning of the sale, and performance records on each hog will be available to prospective buyers. The hogs included in the sale have completed the rigid test requirements of the Swine Evaluation Station, and they meet the requirements of their respective breed association. During the test, the hogs were found to have a high feed efficiency, a high average daily gain and a high percentage of ham and loin as reflected from study of their litter mates.

AVERAGE IS KEY TO "SET ASIDE" PROGRAM

"Average Productivity" will again be a governing factor in the set-aside acreage for the 1972 voluntary wheat, feed grain, and cotton set-aside programs, according to Mr. Clyde P. Mahaffey, Alabama farm program official.

Farmers who sign up February 3-March 10 in these programs will agree to set aside a part of the productive cropland on their farms as a qualifying condition for program participation.

Purpose of this set-aside is to help control production of agricultural crops beyond what can be marketed at fair prices to farmers, said Mr. Mahaffey, Chairman of the Alabama Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee.

For the 1972 set-aside farm programs to be effective, the average productivity rule needs to be closely followed, he said. Last year set-aside acreage was to have a productive capacity at least equal to the land on which program crops are being grown or would have been grown in the current years.

"It's no secret that U.S. farmers can produce more crops than can be readily used. Set-aside helps cut back on this potential for excess crop production. But the set-aside program can work effectively only if adequate quality cropland is designated for set-aside acreage," the ASC Committee Chairman said.

He added, "The average productivity rule will be in effect for all set-aside acreage, both the qualifying percentage needed for program participation and voluntary set-aside which may be under the wheat, feed grain programs."

Under the set-aside concept in farm programs, after a participant makes his set-aside and maintains his conserving base, he may plant his remaining cropland to anything he wishes.

Research Shows Glimmers of Light

By VIRGINIA APGAR, M.D., M.P.H.
Director, Basic Research Dept., The National Foundation March of Dimes

Research into the causes and treatment of birth defects is moving along today at a pace few of us would have believed possible even a decade ago.

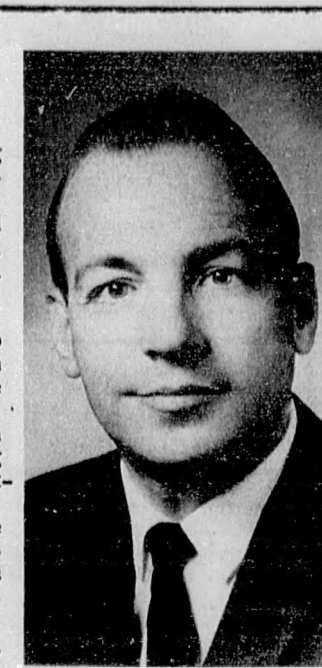

Even so, we scientists are confronted by a long and uphill climb. We lack firm answers to hundreds of questions, but at least our questions are getting sharper and more penetrating. There are a few glimmers of light where, for centuries, there was dark ignorance. As of now, we still cannot prevent most birth defects, but there are at least four areas that show progress.

In research today, perhaps the greatest hope comes from the German measles (rubella) preventive vaccine developed last year by the Federal Government's Division of Biologics Standards of the National Institutes of Health. The vaccine is now undergoing tests around the world. Living with this or similar vaccines is expected in another two or three years well ahead of the next German measles epidemic which will probably hit the United States around 1975.

We have known since 1940 that German measles in the expectant mother, particularly in the first three months of pregnancy, can cause a major cause of birth defects.

The German measles epidemic, including blindness, deafness, heart disease and mental retardation, in at least 20,000 infants. Accordingly, if it proves successful, the new vaccine must be considered a medical breakthrough.

Again, in the area of research, medical science is well on its way toward the conquest of the disease. In the last decade, due mainly to diagnostic advances and fetal transfusions, mortality has already been reduced substantially from this disorder. In 1955, deaths in the United States from Rh factor totaled about 2,400 while in 1965 the figure dropped to 1,500.

The expectation now is that the disease will be wiped out entirely in the foreseeable future. Recent studies in the United States, England and Germany have demonstrated that by treating an Rh-negative woman very soon after her first pregnancy with a specially prepared gamma globulin, which is obtained from blood, she can be prevented from producing antibodies that would attack the red blood cells of her next child.

This treatment should completely prevent Rh disease except among those women who have already been sensitized.

Another provocative step in research into birth defects, the field which The National Foundation-March of Dimes entered after its successful fight against the disease of sickle cell anemia, deals with what is now called "dial" medicine. This means direct treatment of the developing infant within the womb before birth. Some proponents of fetal surgery predict

Refuse Problem Growing In America

The soup can, bread wrapper and citrus bottle that someone threw away today are but a few of the contributions to the growing problem of waste treatment, says Mrs. Virginia White, Extension foods and nutrition specialist. In one year, Americans throw away 48 billion cans, 26 billion bottles and 30 million tons of paper.

The amount of refuse is growing, and its composition is changing. Food packaging accounts for 13 per cent of all household wastes that are collected and makes up much of our litter. Increased use of plastic-coated, paper milk cartons creates a disposal problem.

Waste handling hasn't kept pace with the increasing volume of refuse, points out the specialist. Most of the nation's household refuse is disposed in open dumps. But with increasing population, this practice will cease to be economical or healthy.

Recycling—a process that reduces the accumulation of refuse and conserves each consumer changing his producer or manufacturer is taxed to finance methods of disposing of the refuse venience of modern packaging and seem willing to pay for it, but are they willing to pay for disposal of the refuse that is being created?

Mrs. White says retail prices may result if the natural resource supplies may be the answer to the shopping for food. Most consumers like the convenience of the refuse

4-H Club members (left to right) Brenda Helms, Alice Flowers, Julie Kyser, Kathie Weigand and Andrea Brinkman of New Brockton are showing a book over the series of nutrition lessons they will soon be teaching to a group of younger boys. The series is part of the "Dot" (Diet's Our Thing) program sponsored by the Coffee County Extension service. The program is under the direction of Mrs. Myrna Rhoades, Extension Home Agent. The program is designed to acquaint youth with the basic 4 food groups and the amount of each needed daily. This is accomplished through preparation of recipes based on the milk group, meat group, fruit and vegetable group and the breads and cereals group. The recipes are then repeated at home.

After a second training meeting scheduled for early February, the girls expect to begin work with their group.

Delegates from the 182 local associations of the Alabama Education Association met in Birmingham, January 28-29, for the 1972 EEA Delegate Assembly. The annual AEA policy making body adopted 125 resolutions which will form the Association's program for 1972. Among the 670 delegates in attendance were these four Coffee County educators: (left to right) Marylene Shipman, Gloria Lasser, Thelma G. Martin, and Martia Murdock.

To all the people of Alabama who might someday die.

Funeral Insurance is the easiest way for you to help your family do the hardest thing they'll ever have to do.

Nobody likes to talk about dying. Or even think about it.

But death is a fact of life. When death touches someone close, it's impossible to avoid the emotional upset, but it is possible to avoid the financial problems of a funeral.

In Alabama, thousands of people are doing something about it.

They're buying funeral insurance. It is estimated that two out of every three persons who die in Alabama each year are covered by a funeral insurance policy. By far the most popular is the Brown-Service Funeral Policy issued by Liberty National Life Insurance Company.

Interesting facts, aren't they? Let's take a closer look:

1. Why do so many Alabamians own funeral policies?

Funeral insurance is a convenient, simple, inexpensive way to handle a major expense. It enables you to prepay the costs of a funeral so the cash from your regular life insurance can be used to meet other needs.

2. How does funeral insurance help you?

First, small payments can be made over a period of time. Weekly. Monthly. Yearly. Your choice. Second, if death should occur before the policy is paid up, no more payments are due. Total policy benefits are immediately in effect. And third, the purchase of a Brown-Service Funeral Policy assures that the expense of your funeral will not be a burden upon your estate or your family.

3. How much does a Brown-Service Funeral Policy cost?

The premiums are reasonable. Very reasonable. They're based on the actual cost of providing the funeral. Because of the large number of funerals provided under this plan each year our cost is less than the retail value of the funeral. This saving is passed on to you.

For example, if you're 30 years old, your wife is 27 and your child is 8, you can buy three policies paid up in ten years for only $1.78 a week. Each policy will provide a $600 funeral. The most you can pay is $925.60 (less if death occurs early). The total retail value of the three funerals to be provided is $1800. That's almost twice as much as the most you could pay.

4. If you use a funeral policy, who will provide the funeral?

Most of the leading Funeral Directors in Alabama are authorized to perform the service provided by Brown-Service Funeral Policies. Everything is taken care of for you through the authorized funeral home of your choice. These funeral homes are located in every part of the state.

5. How flexible is a Brown-Service Funeral Policy?

Suppose a more expensive funeral is selected. No problem. The policy is completely flexible. The authorized Funeral Director will give credit for the full retail value of the policy on the cost of the funeral selected.

6. What do you get for your money?

Your invested dollar returns top value. A funeral provided by any Brown-Service Funeral Policy is always equal to or better than any funeral available for the dollar face value of the policy.

7. What benefits are provided if death occurs in Alabama?

The policyholder will get a complete funeral consisting of: Transportation to the funeral home up to 35 miles, embalming, preparation for burial, casket, burial suit or dress, the services of an experienced Funeral Director, a place for holding the memorial service, and transportation to the place of interment up to 35 miles.

8. What benefits are provided if death occurs outside of Alabama?

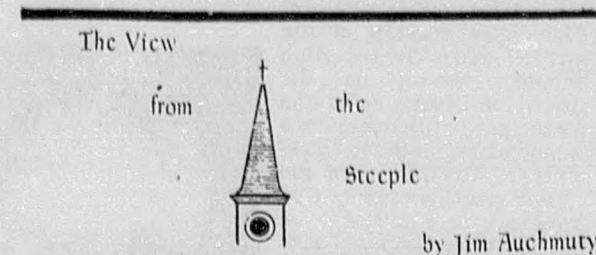

The policy will pay a cash benefit as specified in the policy. On older policies the cash benefit is half the retail value and on currently issued policies it is two-thirds of the retail value.

9. Should funeral insurance be a part of insurance planning?

Definitely. It meets the very first need for insurance at the time of death. It is the easiest, the most convenient, and least expensive way to help your family to do the hardest thing they will ever have to do.

If you don't have a Brown-Service Funeral Policy, now is the time to do something about it. See your Liberty National agent. Let him explain how easily you can have this most basic of all insurance.

Let's talk . . . ABOUT OUR TEENS By Jack Brunson

You have probably made or heard the statement, "Teen-agers have certainly changed since the time I was growing up." On the other hand parents and adults have changed, in many instances, as much if not more, than teen-agers have changed. This is one of the reasons I obtained this series of articles for publication in an effort to communicate with as many parents as possible. The title of this series could just as easily be changed to "Let's Talk About Parents."

Today's Subject: "Vandalism By Teens."

Vandalism by teens is one of the larger problems across the country. It is found everywhere. In the villages and big metropolitan areas. Vandalism is not to be confused with hangings, riots, and other radical activities we read about almost daily. However, it may be reasonable to assume that a person who has been a vandal in his teen years, and was not caught, could very easily be led to more drastic measures later in life. Teen vandals who are caught can seldom give the reason for their actions. Psychiatrists tell us many possible reasons. Common sense tells us the most likely reasons: the potential vandal is out to "have a good time" and runs out of things that give him a "kick." This is most always a more tempting activity when a teen is with one or more friends. Seldom do we find vandalism committed by a "lone wolf" type.

To fight vandalism it naturally helps to try to understand it. Destroying property is sometimes in mind, just to see if it can be a sort of revenge against society in general. Revenge because the vandal does not have the things he wants in life. . . or, just the opposite. . . he has too much and is looking for a way to get rid of it. The best way to avoid having teens become vandals, in my estimation, is to see to it that they learn the value of things. Possibly one way of accomplishing this is teaching responsibility early in life. It is the little things that teach responsibility, teaching a child to take care of his toys, all the way up to setting him save a part time job at the corner drugstore. In short, teaching responsibility means MAKING the child follow a sensible set of rules for behavior from an early age.

My regular readers probably think I dwell a little too much on "MAKING" children do the things they are supposed to do. But, when you stop to consider how very easy it is for a child to "make" him do the right thing at home, rather than waiting until he gets into trouble, (and then someone else, usually in the law enforcement field has to "make" him do what is right), then the whole subject of demanding what is right from a child is much easier to comprehend.

Most every case where a child gets into serious trouble with the law, can be traced back to the fact that he was allowed too much freedom of choice by his parents! Vandalism is a very disheartening demonstration of this fact!

If you ever suspect your teen of taking part in acts of vandalism, bring the subject to a head immediately. Don't let it go without getting to the bottom of what you suspect. . . pin him down and get the truth from him. Then, take the corrective action you know is right! This department investigates many cases of vandalism each year and if your teen is ever involved, kindly understand that we NEED your cooperation to prevent further acts of vandalism! Isn't it better for a teen to stand up to a punishment now rather than after he has put himself in a position of drastic legal action later in life? Sometimes an early punishment by the authorities will prevent a teen from going on to more serious law violations.

Help this department to help ALL teens by reporting what you KNOW about local acts of vandalism in the future. As I have pointed out, many teens start out on a life of criminal activity by "committing acts of vandalism." Surely then, it is up to US as ADULTS to stop it as quickly as possible. Hiding facts we know to be true can only "lead to more and bigger trouble!"

We sincerely solicit parent cooperation and, in return, this department promises honest and adult handling of all cases.

Next week . . . our subject will be "Let's Too Big To Spank". Try to join us, won't you?
